BENNINGTON BRIEFS

News of the Town and Village Told Briefly for Busy Readers

Mrs. B. G. Center of North street is ill.

Mrs. Harriet Williams is ill of the grip.

Miss Florence Center has returned from a visit in South Shaftsbury.

Miss Kate J. Hubbell of Old Bennington is passing a few days in Cohoes.

Mrs. Clark Spencer of Salem visited her father, Henry Marsh over Sunday.

Mrs. A. W. Streeter and Miss Agnes Streeter and Mrs. Mary J. Allen were in Troy Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lutes and daughter, Janet, were guests over Sunday of Mr. Lutes' father, Henry Marsh.

Mrs. A. E. Houle and daughter Jeannette, have returned from Cohoes where they were called by the death of a relative.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip B. Jennings expect to arrive from New York the first of May to open their summer home at Old Bennington.

The ladies of St. Peter's church will serve one of their excellent suppers Thursday evening at the Parish house at 6 o'clock. Tickets 25 cents. Adv.

Francis J. O'Toole, who for the past week has been confined to the house with neuralgia, resumed his duties this morning at the Hurley cigar store.

Nearly ten thousand gallons of oil was placed on the streets of the village Sunday by the street department. The streets were first swept and sprinkled.

Mrs. George E. Stevens, who has been passing a portion of the winter at Southport, Conn., has opened her apartment in New York where she will pass a few weeks before opening her summer home here.

Anvil Date Back of History.

The anvil was known in the earliest times, being spoken of in the Bible, the prophet Isaiah saying (chapter 47, verse 7), "So the carpenter encouraged the goldsmith, and he that smiteth with the hammer, him that smiteth the anvil." It is not known who first used it, but of course the anvil of antiquity was unlike that of today as perfected by modern workmanship. The anvil still used in the orient, however, is a boot shaped piece of metal inserted in a section of oak or walnut log. Larger or smaller it is used by tinsmiths, shoemakers, silversmiths and blacksmiths. The anvils used in this country are commonly made of cast iron faced with steel and are of paralleloiped form, with a steel cone or beak at one end and a "handy hole" for inserting chisel or other tools at the other end.—Boston Globe

Keep the Children Bright and Happy

Happy youngsters must be healthy. The digestive organs of children get out of order as readily as do those of their elders, and the result is equally distressing. When the bowels are clogged with an accumulation of refuse from the stomach the child naturally becomes cross and fretful from the discomfort, and is often punished for temper when medical attention is really what is needed.

The next time your child is cross and unhappy, without apparent reason, try giving it a mild laxative. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a mild, pleasant tasting combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, and is especially recommended for children because of its freedom from all opiate or narcotic drugs and its gentle action. It is sold in drug stores everywhere. A free trial bottle can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ills.

All who lay claim to any degree of patriotism and public spirit will make it a business to swat the fly, the mouse and the rat on all occasions.

Somewhat more than a century ago dahlias were introduced into France as an edible crop, but found no favor with either man or beast, owing to their medicinal flavor.

Crude petroleum has taken the place of coal on many railroads in the west and south. It is estimated that about 32,000,000 gallons of crude oil were consumed by the railroads in the year 1912, while the total mileage of railroads operated with oil is 30,000.

A good old mother eighty-one years old, who lives in Ohio, is said to have ridden horseback because of muddy roads in order that she might attend an extension school. Although she had kept house all her life, she wanted to see how housekeeping could be taught.

A good deal of damage by codling moth in the apple orchard may be headed off by going over the trees carefully and destroying the wintering larvae which will be found in the crotches of the trees and under the rough bark. Every one of these nests that is destroyed will mean from forty to fifty fewer apple worms getting in their work on the fruit.

There is little question that the south is coming to the front agriculturally. North Carolina, which is not in the lead by any means, last year produced $241,000,000 of farm products, according to figures published by the state department of agriculture. Corn was the leading crop and was worth $65,000,000; cotton, $50,000,000; tobacco, $31,000,000; oats, $31,000,000; pasturage, $30,000,000. Sweet potatoes and other minor crops made up the balance.

The young wife who has just taken up her housekeeping duties would do well to provide herself with a cookbook, in which the recipes are not up with special reference to satisfying the appetites of two people. This will not only result in economy in the management of the culinary department, but will reduce the number of warmers with which the young husband will have to be served, and it will be well if he doesn't have too many of these the first year.

A Utah woman, an instructor in domestic science in the state college, has, with considerable pains, figured out that in getting the meals for a year in a home into which she recently moved she traveled 125 miles in a year. Using this as something to go on, she arranged a model and convenient kitchen in which the walking required to get the same number of meals during the year was reduced to fifty-seven miles, or less than half the distance she traveled before.

There should be one or more hives of bees in every orchard. The plan has two things to commend it. First, the honey the bees will make will more than pay for the trouble of caring for them. The second and chief advantage of having the bees comes from the service they render in pollination of blossoms, which results in a fuller setting of fruit. In many sections there are orchards which set light crops of fruit year after year chiefly because of the fact that there are not enough bees to assist in this work.

A simple rule for getting at the number of tons of hay in an outdoor stack of hay is the following: First, ascertain the area of the cross section of the stack by multiplying the width of the stack at the bottom by the "distance over" from the ground on one side of the stack to the ground on the other. The area of the cross section will be about one-third or more, accurately, 31 of the result. The contents of the stack are then got by multiplying its length by the area of the cross section, and the number of tons contained by dividing the contents in cubic feet by the number of cubic feet agreed upon as a ton, from 450 to 600.

The United States commissioner of education strongly recommends public school farms and gardens. He thinks these should be run throughout the year instead of having a three months' vacation in midsummer. It has been estimated that on such farms each child beyond a certain age could produce $50 worth of stuff, which would make $100,000,000 for the 2,000,000 school children whom the plan would enlist. The general plan of having the kids work is all right, but, judging from experience, there is reason to believe that the grand total to be realized ought to be quartered, and it would be high at that.

The Case of Leo Frank

"I am not asking for mercy," said Leo M. Frank in his Atlanta prison when informed that his attorneys would ask the Prison Commission for pardon, but for a commutation of the death sentence to imprisonment for life. "I am innocent and have been unjustly convicted. What I want is justice and vindication."

Frank is the victim of a monstrous injustice. The case calls for a remedy, commutation would be but a palliative. Hardly that, for in the judgment of most men life imprisonment is scarcely less terrible than death upon the scaffold. To be shut up in prison for life is a punishment, punishment implies guilt, and this man's guilt has not been proved. A full pardon is the only way when the law is impotent to right the wrong it has done.

The prevailing public belief outside the state of Georgia is that Frank has not had a fair trial, that his guilt has not yet been proved. The public cannot know that he is innocent, it does not know that there is an immense preponderance of probability in favor of innocence, it does know that the conditions under which he was tried and found guilty were such that an absolutely innocent man would shrink from them with horror. The most innocent man on earth would turn pale with fear had he to make his defense before a jury standing in such terror of mob violence that it dared not return a verdict of acquittal. The highest court has said that Frank has enjoyed his constitutional right to due process of law. The procedure was in proper form, the respect was paid to the sacred technicalities. But the eternal truth is that the trial was not a fair one, that justice was not done. The trial judge himself was not convinced of the prisoner's guilt and the circumstances set forth in Justice Holmes' statement of undisputed and indisputable fact leave in the public mind the positive conviction that justice has not been done to Frank.

The case is remitted to the state of Georgia, not to its courts, but to its Governor, its people. There are today countless men in Georgia who believe Frank innocent, or at least that his guilt has not been proved, yet they dare not say so, so powerful even yet is the mindless mob passion that rages for the death of this victim. Yet we find it impossible to believe that the State of Georgia would send Frank to the scaffold. It would not have the reckless hardness to defy the overwhelming public opinion of the country, the Commonwealth would never consent to blacken its own reputation by such a crime against justice. The remedy which the courts, enslaved to their own forms of procedure, have denied, the State for its own sake would be compelled to grant.
